

Fall 2019 Brown Bag Advising Colloquia Come Join the Discussion!

“Downright Rude and Sometimes Even Nasty Behavior in the Classroom—What Gives? Why? And how?”

Pam Cross and Alexandra Hultquist, First Year Studies

Wednesday, September 18, 12:45 p.m. in C135

Disruptive students, left unmanaged, can create huge problems with your relationship with your students. They can undermine other students, the classroom climate, and (let’s face it, the important part), your ability to teach, and stay human. The presenters will cover such topics as why students act out; how to stay in control of your class; and strategies for dealing with troublesome students, both in the classroom and in out. The presenters will share their strategies but also want to hear about your experiences and solutions.

“Understanding and Supporting Stockton’s Military-Affiliated Population”

Jason Babin, Director of the Office of Military and Veteran Services

Tuesday, September 24, 12:30 p.m. in K 102

When service members arrive home from a military deployment some can feel out of place or even isolated from the people they know. Many may miss the closeness they shared with members of their unit, and nothing at home feels familiar. This is a common experience for our veterans who attempt to transition back home and school after service in the military. While many are successful reintegrating back into their civilian life, some can experience serious challenges. At Stockton University, we want to change that! We hope to better prepare staff and faculty to support and assist this unique population in classroom and advising situations. We will discuss the goals and outreach of the Office of Military and Veterans Services, Stockton’s military-affiliated population, and overall national trends of military and veteran students.

“Getting Ready for Precepting”

Paula Dollarhide and Brittany Jenniss, the Center for Academic Advising

Tucker Rowlinson, Information Technology Services

Tuesday, October 16, 12:30 p.m. in F 210

Wednesday, October 17, 12:45 p.m. in F210

Come brush up on your advising knowledge! Tucker Rowlinson will assist with setting up your precepting appointments using Calendly. We will answer questions about using Degree Works and other questions you might have about policies and procedures. We will show an advising syllabus and Blackboard advising sites to prepare students for effective precepting. Let’s get ready for precepting together.
