STOCKTON UNIVERSITY
Stockton Coastal Collaborative
Math and Science Partnerships Program – July 1, 2016-June 30, 2018
Funded by the New Jersey Department of Education

Through a team that includes faculty and staff from the School of Education, including its Southern Regional Institute and ETTC, and the School of Natural Sciences and Mathematics (NAMS), Stockton University will lead a cohort of teachers from five K-8 school districts in a 2-year project that will explore the instructional shifts required to successfully implement the Next Generation Science Standards (NGSS). A needs analysis of the districts, all sending districts to the Greater Egg Harbor Regional High School District, indicates that as many as 60% of the teachers have not participated in any professional development related to NGSS. Administrators from each partner district also reported that their most important need with respect to NGSS is professional development for their teachers.

High-quality professional learning opportunities as well as continuous interaction with faculty from the University will support 35 participating teachers from Galloway Twp. Schools, Port Republic School, Hamilton Twp. Schools, Mullica Twp. Schools, and Egg Harbor City Schools as they build their capacity to become effective leaders in their own districts and across the state in both the pedagogy and the science content required for systemic adoption and implementation of the new standards.

Under the direction of the School of Education, participating teachers will be introduced to the tenets of ambitious science instruction which encourage students to understand science ideas, participate in the discourses of the discipline, and solve authentic problems. Central to this project will be opportunities to strengthen participants' content knowledge within the context of instructional practices. Utilizing the laboratories and classrooms of Stockton's new Unified Science Center and its Nacote Creek Marine Science Field Station, the NAMS faculty will offer a rich program of content-specific sessions to align with participants' needs and the NGSS implementation schedule while faculty from the School of Education will support content with pedagogical strategies that will lead to more effective classroom practices.

An additional partner in this initiative will be Stockton's STEM Collaborative, a newly funded program at the university. The intent of this cross disciplinary program is to serve as a clearinghouse for its constituent groups in each of the academic schools and match faculty/staff with opportunities to support STEM/STEAM initiatives at the university, in K-12 schools, and in the community.

Principal Investigators: Dr. Kimberly Lebak, Associate Professor of Education, Ms. Patricia Weeks, Director of the Southern Regional Institute and ETTC.

Purpose

To establish general principles for investment of Stockton University (the "University") funds not required for operations. This is an area of particular responsibility for the Board of Trustees (the "Board") and the Investment Committee, as the Investment Committee (the "Committee") is called upon to ensure the prudent investment of the University's assets in accordance with the long-term objectives of the school. The University's Statement of Investment Policies and Objectives ("the Policy") has been established to provide a general framework for the management and investment of the University's assets.

Investment Philosophy and Objectives

Investment Philosophy

The investment philosophy for the fund has been determined with careful consideration given to the University's primary purpose, its investment goals and objectives, common practices in prudent investment program management, spending policies, and liquidity needs. The investment philosophy embraces the following:

- Strategic asset allocation is an important factor influencing long-term investment returns, but the school recognizes the importance of dynamically adjusting asset allocation in light of evolving market opportunities to preserve assets and potentially increase returns.
- The University's purpose is to exist in perpetuity and, therefore, a long-term time horizon is appropriate; over the near- to medium-term, however, assets and liabilities will be matched appropriately given the uncertainty in fundraising and enrollment activities, the initiation of bond principal repayments, and the need to generate reliable cash flows in support of school objectives.
- While the University's time horizon is long, from time to time markets present opportunities of which the school will seek to take advantage.
- Market-related risks are unavoidable as the fund pursues its investment strategies. The school will, however, broadly diversify its assets across and within asset classes and pursue asset allocation strategies to manage risks appropriately.
- Active and passive investment strategies will be combined so as to maximize alpha potential relative to additional risks incurred in seeking to outperform markets.

The Board has established an investment philosophy that stresses managing the risks associated with their pursuit of the highest maximum long-term return, along with the need for short term liquidity.

Investment Objectives

As part of this philosophy, the Committee has established the following Objectives for the fund:

- The overall objective for the University's is to achieve a real (after inflation) annual return of 2.5% over long periods (approximately 15 years). A secondary objective is to increase the corpus of the Investment Fund over time in order to generate additional income for University operations.
- Each of the University's portfolios will be constructed by taking on the level of downside risk associated with the stated level of return.

Contingency Reserve

The University Fund shall maintain a Contingency Reserve of cash and cash equivalents (defined as either FDIC insured or Government Fixed Income money markets with overnight liquidity and non-floating net asset values) that can be utilized, under the direction of the President & Board, to meet capital expenditure needs of the University. There is no obligation of the University to utilize these reserves, as the University does not need to meet any distribution requirements to meet tax regulations or to maintain its tax exempt status. Advisors are expected to maintain 5% of their overall portfolio balance in cash and cash equivalents to create this Contingency Reserve.

In the event that Contingency Reserve or a portion thereof are withdrawn from an Advisor's portfolio, subsequently creating an asset allocation which does not meet the 5% guideline, Advisors will use best efforts to return their portfolios to compliance within 180 days. This time frame will also apply to any other asset class allocations which may have changed as a result of the withdrawal. The intent of the Contingency Reserve is to mitigate the potential negative implications of a cash withdrawal amidst volatile markets. In addition, the use of short term credit facilities to provide needed liquidity and mitigate the effect of undesirable liquidations is allowed, subject to the approval of the Board of Trustees.

Policy Administrator: Director of Marketing Communications

Authority: N.J.S.A. 18A: 64-6 and 18A: 64-8 – Agreements; State of New Jersey with Unions and Associations

Effective Date: July 23, 1980; February 16, 2011; Upon Approval by Board of Trustees

Index Cross-References: Procedure 1102: Duplicating Material; Procedure 1104: Printing Request Approvals

Policy File Number: I-111

Approved By: Board of Trustees

POLICY:

- A. Background. The State of New Jersey recognizes certain unions and associations as representatives for groups of University employees. This recognition is for purposes of collective negotiations concerning the terms and conditions of employment. Further, the state, acting for the University, has agreed to permit usage of support facilities for union or association officials, with reimbursement at cost for these privileges. The printing or duplicating of certain union materials would be included as one of these privileges.
- B. Establish Policy. The provisions of Procedure 1102: Duplicating Material, and Procedure 1104: Printing Request Approvals, apply to all requests from within the University for printing or duplicating services.
- C. Screening Process. A screening process is used in the print shop to prevent the misuse of valuable University resources. The process requires shop personnel to obtain approval from the Director of Marketing Communications prior to processing any materials which might be:
 1. Intended for off-campus distribution.
 2. Judged as unrelated to University business.
- D. Political Orientation. Political materials relating to off-campus organizations or personnel are not to be printed. The suggestion should be made to those requesting this service that this type material be printed or duplicated by outside establishments.

- E. Criteria for Printing. Materials which should be processed and paid for by the union or association must relate to the broad area of "terms and conditions of employment." This is the phraseology used to describe the area of representation provided by the unions and it follows that services should be based on the same criterion.

POLICY

Service Animal and Emotional Support Animal Policy

Policy Administrator: Chief Officer for Institutional Diversity and Equity
Authority: Americans with Disabilities Act of 1990 (ADA), 42 U.S.C. §§ 12101-12213 (2013)
(amended 2008); Section 504 of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973
Effective Date: Upon Approval by Board of Trustees
Index Cross-References: Procedure 3990 – Service Animal Procedure, Student and Community
Procedure; Procedure 3991 – Emotional Support Animal Procedure
Policy File Number: I-125
Approved By: Board of Trustees

Stockton University supports the use of service animals for an individual with a disability, including a physical, sensory, psychiatric, intellectual, or other mental disability, which will promote the independence and safety of the individual. Title III of the ADA defines service animals as a dog or miniature horse that performs tasks specific to the individual's disability. Animals other than dogs or miniature horses are not considered service animals.

It is the policy of Stockton University that a service dog trained to do work or perform tasks for an individual with a disability be permitted in all University facilities and grounds where students, the community, and other participants in services, programs, or activities are allowed to go.

Stockton University will make reasonable modifications within its policies and procedures to permit an individual with a disability the use of a miniature horse if the miniature horse has been individually trained to perform the task or work for that individual.

Individuals requesting emotional support animals, which do not fall under the classification of a service animal, to reside in on-campus dwellings or on-campus office space will complete the appropriate paperwork with either the Learning Access Program or Human Resources, depending upon the individual making the request. Documentation will be required to support this request.
