POMONA, N.J. - Students at Stockton University will have the opportunity to start the new year off by hearing from a sitting U.S. Supreme Court Justice.

Officials at Stockton announced that United States Supreme Court Associate Justice Neil Gorsuch will appear on the campus on Tuesday, January 23rd, at 2:45 p.m. to speak to students, faculty, and staff about the crucial role of the Supreme Court.

The event, hosted by the William J. Hughes Center for Public Policy at Stockton, is part of a special academic initiative for the Stockton community and will not be open to the general public.

Justice Gorsuch took his seat in the Supreme Court in April after being nominated for the position by President Donald Trump.
