Galloway Twp., NJ – The Richard Stockton College of NJ will host the New Jersey Marine Education Association's "Teach at the Beach 2008" on May 16, 2008. Teach at the Beach is a unique hands-on event for educators to earn Professional Development Credits while learning about the local marine environment.

Dr. Mark Sullivan, Assistant Professor of Marine Science will present a keynote speech "The Secret Lives of Eels." The indoor and outdoor sessions available to participants include: a tour of the Mullica River, making a waterfowl decoy silhouette, creating a saltwater aquarium, seaweed pressing, a salt marsh canoe ecotour and many other activities.

The popular event, limited to 125 participants, is scheduled to take place on Friday May 16, 2008

Following check-in, coffee and the keynote address, buses will leave for the various sessions. Lunch and door prizes will be provided.

Addition information on the program is available at www.stockton.edu. (In the Keyword and Search box, type in the keywords "teach beach").
