Galloway Township, NJ - Manahawkin resident Stephanie Hoffman, a student in the School of Education at Stockton University, was recently awarded a $500 scholarship by Delta Kappa Gamma (DKG), a professional society of women educators.

Hoffman is currently working as a student teacher at Central Regional Middle School in Bayville, Ocean County, NJ. She is set to graduate from Stockton in May.

"I am so honored to be a part of a wonderful Social Studies Department at Central Regional during my time student teaching," said Hoffman. "I learned so much and would like to thank DKG and the Xi Chapter as well for acknowledging my hard work and commitment to the field of education."

Dean Claudine Keenan of the School of Education hosted the meeting of the Xi Chapter of DKG at Stockton, where the presentation was made by local chapter President Janel Shafer.

"Stockton provides many scholarships for future teachers, and we welcome additional scholarships from professional organizations which also support future teachers," said Dean Keenan. "We are grateful to the members of DKG Xi Chapter for selecting one of our future teachers as a scholarship recipient."
