Galloway Twp., NJ- The Richard Stockton College of New Jersey will host a head shaving event on Thursday, April 5th to benefit the St. Baldrick's Foundation. The Foundation is a charity dedicated to raising money for childhood cancer research.

The event will take place from 8 p.m. to 11 p.m. Thursday, April 5th in the Lodge at Lakeside on the main campus here. Every year, thousands of brave men, women and children give up their locks in solidarity with those who have lost their hair to chemotherapy and radiation treatments and in support of childhood cancer research. Volunteer "shavees" raise money from friends family and co-workers and then have their heads shaved by a certified barber on stage at the event. The Barber Shoppe at Historic Smithville will be doing the shaving for Stockton's event.

People can help out by volunteering to have their head shaved and by donating money to the event. There will be free food and prizes that all attendees will be eligible to receive.

"This event is a lot of fun, but also very impactful," said Scott Mangino, a Stockton Housing Complex Director who is organizing it. "All moneys raised goes toward grants to researchers who are focusing on finding cures to the cancers those impact children's lives."
