

Looking to engage your students in conversations about contemporary and pressing environmental problems?

Stockton University's science professors are offering free, virtual learning sessions with your high school science classes!

Students will build critical thinking skills and become better equipped to make informed and responsible decisions that impact the environment, as they learn about modern research topics and advanced technology used to combat these issues and the growing demand for scientists and specialists in these fields.

Schedule today!

Explore Topics in:

- Environmental Science
- Geology
- Marine Science
- Physics
- Sustainability

*Topical presentations are available.

Questions: Adriane.Sicknick@stockton.edu or call 609.652.4468.