The mission of the South Jersey Culture & History Center at Stockton University is to foster awareness of the rich cultural and historical heritage of southern New Jersey, to promote the study of this heritage, especially among area students, and to produce publishable materials that provide a lasting and deepened understanding of this heritage.

We republish hard-to-find titles of particular note and publish new works by contemporary authors and scholars. SoJourn presents the work of local historians.

Stockton University students, enrolled in the SJCHC editing internship, assist in editing books and articles, designing the layout, and setting the type. The directors of the South Jersey Culture & History Center oversee the publication of all titles. Together we proudly maintain Stockton's local history press.

Call for Articles

The South Jersey Culture & History Center at Stockton University publishes annual issues of SoJourn. We actively seek community members, avocational historians, and scholars to contribute essays on topics related to South Jersey. Illustrations to accompany these articles are a plus. Articles should be written for laypersons who are interested and curious about South Jersey topics, but do not necessarily have expertise in the areas covered. Potential authors may contact the editors for advice on style details or just follow the style in this issue. Journal editors will be happy to guide any would-be authors. In certain instances, Stockton editing interns may be assigned to assist authors with writing.

Sample topics might include:

Biographical sketches of important but forgotten local people; the development or succession of a community's roads, bridges or buildings; local transportation (focused by mode, area or era) and what changes it wrought in the served communities; history of community businesses and industries (wineries, garment factories, agriculture, boat building, clamming, etc.); old school houses, old hotels, or meeting halls; narrative descriptions of local geographical features; essays concerned with folklore, music, arts; and reviews of new local interest publications. Photo essays and old photograph and postcard reproductions are welcome with applicable captions. In short, if a South Jersey topic interests you, it will likely interest SoJourn's readers.

Parameters for submissions:

- Submissions must pertain to topics bounded within the eight southernmost counties of New Jersey (Burlington & Ocean Counties and south)
- Manuscripts should be approximately 2,000–5,000 words long (6 to 16 pages of double-spaced text and 9 to 20 pages including images)
- Manuscripts should be submitted in digital format (Word- or pdf-formatted documents preferred)
- Images should be submitted as high-resolution tiff - or jpeg-formatted files (editors can assist with digital conversion of photos if necessary). 300 dpi resolution, or higher, preferred
- Complete and appropriate citations printed as endnotes should be employed
- Original submissions only. Copyright licenses for all images must be obtained by the author or should be copyright-free figures and/or figures in the public domain

Previous SoJourn Articles

- If essays are accepted, authors should submit a short 50 to 100 word autobiographical statement
- Articles need to be more than just a chronology of the given topic. The author should be able to properly contextualize the subject by answering such questions as: a) why is this important?; b) what is the impact on the local or regional history? and c) how does it compare to similar events/personages/changes/processes in other localities?

Call for submissions:

Submissions are accepted on a rolling basis. Send inquiries or submissions to Thomas.Kinsella@stockton.edu or Paul.Schopp@stockton.edu.

Notes and Queries: Finally, we invite readers to submit brief notes of interest or queries about topics of South Jersey history to either of the two editors named immediately above.
