Galloway Township, NJ- Dr. Janice Joseph, Professor of Criminal Justice at The Richard Stockton College of New Jersey, was elected to the Executive Board of the International Scientific and Professional Advisory Council (ISPAC) of the United Nations Crime Prevention and Criminal Justice Program, a United Nations institute in Milan, Italy. Members are selected by geographical region or by country. Dr. Joseph will represent the United States during the two-year term of service.

ISPAC, founded in 1991, brings together top criminal justice professionals from around the world to research, analyze, and act on crime prevention and criminal justice issues. As a board member, Dr. Joseph will assist in the planning and organization of the December 2010 ISPAC annual conference. She is organizing a workshop, on behalf of ISPAC, for the 2010 U.N. Congress in Brazil. Dr. Joseph will continue her two-year service as Chair of the Working Party on Violence Against Women for ISPAC. She is also a member of the U.N. Liaison Committee for the World Society of Victimology.

Dr. Joseph is presently the President of the Academy of Criminal Justice Sciences, a national criminal justice organization of over 2,800 national and international members. She is the first person of African ancestry to be elected to this position in the organization's forty-six year history. She is also the organization's official NGO representative at national and international meetings of the United Nations.

On the international level, Dr. Joseph team teaches a graduate-level criminal justice summer course in Dubrounik, Croatia where approximately 20 international professors meet to teach students from countries around the world.
